

Timber Hitch

The Timber hitch is tied by passing the working end of a rope down behind your load and bringing it to the front then make a loop around the standing end (the end you aren't using) ensuring the working end crosses over the top of the part going behind the standing end, keeping the knot loose to add in turns, when finished, pull tight as the knot will fall apart once tension is released.

